Biological Agents and the Threat of an H5N1 Influenza Pandemic

There are virtually thousands of biological threats that could be released or activated at any time, on purpose or accidentally. Besides the Avian Flu, what threats should we know about and prepare for?

Gunnar J. Kuepper is Chief of Operations with EDM, an independent firm which advises private, non-profit, and governmental institutions throughout the world regarding emergency management programs, conducts comprehensive vulnerability studies, and communicates findings of response operations for catastrophic incidents.

Workshop: Pandemic Notification, Escalation and Incident Management

The threat of a pandemic is nothing new. To business continuity planners, it is a real issue, one that they have been dealing with for over a year now. Pandemic outbreaks require specialized strategies over and above planning for most other types of disruptions. Strohl Systems knows this and supports you by giving you the information you need to build your plan.

This workshop will be a practical application of Strohl's tools as well as practical knowledge regarding pandemic response.

Stacy Henry specializes in both presentations and training of Strohl Systems' products to staff, management, and ownership levels.
